WE SELL INFORMATION

Welcome to our Spring 1999 list. We have the best selection of numismatic literature available in the country, and at the best prices. This list contains selections from over 225 different cataloguers, over 100 authors, and nearly a dozen numismatic literature dealers.

Do you have enough numismatic information to keep pace with a billion-dollar coin market? The answer for many of us is "probably not". Numismatic information is cheaper than most coins, but has a much greater value!

If you don't have a reference library with many previously issued auction catalogues and reference books, you are limiting your chances for enjoyment and success in numismatics. Ten years from now there will be very few auction catalogues printed. Why? Because most coin auctions will be conducted electronically on the internet. Much information will be lost when this happens as there will be few, if any, "hard copies" ever printed for future reference.

Think about it for just a second. It will be fast and exciting as it's taking off, but will this electronic format improve the pool of knowledge? I seriously doubt it because no one will take the time, or be paid, to enter the information from the past into an electronic format where everyone would benefit.

So, it would be a wise decision on your part to acquire as many catalogues as you can, especially at these prices. We are in the "Golden Age" of auction catalogues as more coins are plated than ever before. The information you need about your particular field of interest is ready for you to uncover. If numismatic literature is new to you, you'll find it exciting, informative, enjoyable, and rewarding.

As you look through this list and see something of interest, just give us a call. We are here to help and enjoy talking about coins and catalogues. We spend all day going through catalogues and may be able to recommend some that will be beneficial for you.

As always, Jenny and I say "THANK YOU" to all that have ordered in the past. We have added many new titles to our reference books, and hope you enjoy the tremendous selection in this list.

Best wishes,

Karl & Jenny Moulton

19TH CENTURY AUCTION CATALOGUES

* * * * *

These sales represent the core of American numismatics. The first coin auction of note was the Lewis Roper Sale in 1851. By the end of the 1850's many collectors were active from Philadelphia to Boston. The big market was in Proof sets, thanks to a friendly mint director who was happy to oblige any and all orders – including himself. These early collectors sold their duplicates, and acquired missing pieces to help fill in their collections by bidding in auction sales, just like now.

Names like McCoy, Mickley, Cohen, Jenks, Stickney, Garrett, etc. are remembered today; and any coins accurately pedigreed are highly prized items indeed. Interestingly, the collector of this time did not focus on top quality type coins. His main interest was apt to be U.S. & World Medals, George Washington items, Early Copper, Tokens, Ancients, and Colonials.

Dealers like Ed Cogan, W.E. Woodward, William Strobridge, A.B. Sage, Ebenezer Mason, John Haseltine, Ed Frossard, Sigismund Harzfeld, the Chapman brothers, H.P. Smith, H.G. Sampson, David Proskey, George Massamore, and Charles Steigerwalt all presented many fine auction sales. At times there were more than 60 combined sales by the dealers listed above in a single year. That's more than one sale per week! Public disputes such as Cogan vs Mason, Frossard vs Woodward, Harzfeld vs the U.S. Mint, and virtually everyone vs the Chapman's cataloguing the Bushnell sale, all added spicy ingredients to the marketplace. It was truly an interesting time in American numismatics.

A priced and named Lewis Roper catalogue originally belonging to Charles Ira Bushnell just sold for nearly $10,000 at auction; a new all time record for any single piece of numismatic literature. We congratulate the cataloguer, George Kolbe, on his fine efforts with the Harry Bass literature collection. With three more sales scheduled, it's a great time to acquire some of these collectible pieces of early American numismatic history.

Also, with the recent release of Dave Bower's magnificent book about Augustus B. Sage and early American numismatics before the Civil War, the conditions are ripe for prices to rise as the very limited supply dwindles.

Great American Sales offers the finest selection of 19th century sales available in the country today at fixed prices. Check the listings carefully and favor us with your choices.

Collecting these early sales is challenging, but not really expensive. It's an exciting adventure trying to complete a set from any one of these pioneer dealers. This writer has been enjoying this form of bibliomania for years now. Today there are approximately a half dozen dealers that conduct literature mail bid sales.

The following selection provides you with an opportunity to choose a 100+ year old coin sale at a price that will seem reasonable, if not downright cheap, when we reach the 21st century. You, too, can join in the fun. We will be happy to offer opinions, insights, and answers to any questions that come our way. Now, on to the goodies.....

All catalogues are in very good to fine condition. Notable defects are described. Due to their age and the quality of paper used, all are quite fragile. HWP indicates Hand-Written Prices.

This sale contained the only circulated example of an 1827/3 quarter. Mr. White had owned this coin before 1867 as verified in a letter written by cataloguer Ed Cogan. The apparent buyer of this coin was Nicholas Petry. When the sale of his collection took place in May of 1893, the Chapman brothers failed to make note of this pedigree. Instead, the Chapman's created a misleading story about the piece being found in circulation. The coin was purchased by Virgil Brand at the Petry sale. It remained in his collection until his death in 1926. In October of 1937 a probate judge divided the Brand collection in half between his two younger brothers, Horace and Armin. Armin consigned the coin to Wayte Raymond and it appeared in the December 21, 1937, J.C. Morganthau sale #384 as lot #175. Louis Eliasberg bought this coin and it remained in his collection until the Eliasberg Collection sale in April of 1997 by Bowers & Merena. The Clapp family never owned this piece. This is the first accurate pedigree about this particular coin to appear in print..... 75.

THE CATALOGUES OF Q. DAVID BOWERS

Bowers & Ruddy Galleries, in Hollywood, California, named their auction division the American Auction Association; the first eleven sales bear this name. A strong beginning with the Armand Champa Sale in 1972 led to success after success.

We have lowered many prices on the finest catalogues ever written about American Numismatics. The Bowers catalogues are indeed the premier sales by which all others are judged. If you don't have them, you should.

"TICKETS TO THE PAST"

by Karl Moulton

We all know collecting coins and currency is loads of fun, and it provides us with many hours of enjoyment. There's one thing that makes the collecting of coins a more complete experience; that is numismatic literature in all of its various forms. It's what separates the true numismatist from the collector or investor. Even if you don't remember everything you read, the pictures in old auction catalogues are worth a thousand words and more. Seeing these beautiful coins over and over keeps our interest alive.

What would the hobby of today be without the "Redbook", the many auction catalogues, various specialized reference books, Coin World and Numismatic News, and, yes, even the "Graysheet". These publications all contribute a great deal to the understanding and enjoyment of the multi-faceted hobby of numismatics. Guess what --- they are all just as collectible as the coins, medals, and tokens. If the truth were to be known, numismatic literature is, in most cases, much rarer than the coins of any given year. This writer has spent many stimulating and educational hours perusing the various numismatic literature mail bid sales trying to complete a set of all 19th century auction catalogues. This form of collecting is known as "bibliomania".

For the most part, the literature of United States numismatics started in the 1850's. This was brought about due to the desire for information from the growing number of collectors. In 1842, William E. Dubois and Jacob Eckfeldt, both U.S. Mint Assayers, wrote the first U.S. numismatic work, A Manual of Gold and Silver Coins of All Nations Struck Within the Past Century. This was shortened to the "Mint Manual" by contemporary collectors. It quickly sold out -- even back then. What is truly remarkable is that they released another, updated version in 1850. This was during one of the busiest times in Mint history for the Assay department as they were receiving huge shipments of gold from California. Some of the versions of this second edition even contained small sample packets of California gold on page 235. Now that's a sure-fire way to generate some interest in a book!

Most of what we know today came from contemporary writings by collectors, coin dealers, and Mint Officials during the 19th century. Modern researchers rely heavily on the documentation of what is contained in literature such as yearly Mint Reports, old auction catalogues, fixed price lists, and periodicals. When one studies these interesting "tickets to the past", a picture soon forms about the writers and people mentioned inside.

Although there is no known photograph of the famous 19th century coin dealer William Elliot Woodward, we know a great deal about him and American numismatics just by reading his auction catalogues. Woodward was responsible for at least 111 coin sales from 1860 to 1890. A complete set of his catalogues has traded hands at $20,000.

Numismatics is made up of two equally important elements: people and money. The United States Mint does not make any coins, the people who work there do. The Mint is merely a production facility -- only a building. The people responsible for all phases of our nation's coinage from the very beginning in colonial America to the present are all portrayed in numismatic literature.

The struggles of minting our nation's early coinage are well chronicled in books such as The U.S. Mint and Coinage by Don Taxay, or First United States Mint - It's People and It's Operations by Frank Stewart. By reading these two works, names like Adam Eckfeldt, David Rittenhouse, John Reich, and Christian Gobrecht take on a more personal meaning to the reader.

Then there are the collectors and dealers. Old auction catalogues from the 19th century are a prime source for absolutely fascinating accounts of people and their involvement with numismatics. Dealers would sell to the collectors, collectors would uncover a hoard and sell it in an auction, rare coins would magically appear from a European source, clandestine patterns would show up in an auction without any fanfare; and, yes, there were even grading disputes.

Some of these disputes involved fabrications and electrotypes of rare coins. The numismatic periodicals of the day, written primarily by coin dealers, contain many insights and verbal assaults on what other dealers were doing. Ed Frossard made remarks about W. Elliot Woodward saying he could not tell the difference between Original and Restrike Proof Half Cents. Woodward responded poignantly with a two-page satire of Ichabod Crane (Frossard) in the early printings of his 39th auction catalogue. This, of course, didn't sell any coins or medals; but it sure made Woodward feel better. Woodward was the leader in using the printers ink.

As we progress to the 20th century, the Chapman brothers, Samuel and Henry, are among the leaders in the field. From 1879 to the late 1920's they handled some of the most important collections ever formed. They made some mistakes in their catalogues, and most people were glad to tell them about it; but as a whole their combined efforts represent a giant step forward for American numismatics.

Max Mehl and Wayte Raymond made plans to form a partnership in New York in 1912. This never materialized and they went their separate ways. Both men went on to influence the hobby and coin business in very dramatic ways. Mehl was the great promoter spending huge sums on advertising; while Raymond was the influential publisher. His literature, both U.S. and world, sowed the seeds for what we know today.

In 1935 Raymond published his first Standard Catalogue of United States Coins and Currency. It was well illustrated and gave mintage figures and valuations in several different grades. He published one every year, adding additional features such as tokens and commemoratives. Each year a different color was selected for the cover.

For 1947 his choice was maroon with gold lettering on the spine and front cover. If this rings any bells, then you guessed it. The "Redbook" or Guide Book of United States Coins by Richard S. Yeoman (his real last name was Yeo) copied the exact color scheme when it first appeared later that year. I'm glad Raymond didn't choose pink that year or we would today have the best selling piece of numismatic literature known as the "Pinkbook".

We also have Wayte Raymond to thank for many fine coin auctions. He was involved with the United States Coin Company with Elmer Sears before World War I. In 1932 he and James Macallister began the J.C. Morgenthau catalogues during the great depression. He even catalogued his own sales until 1950. The coins included were from such famous collections as Virgil Brand, Waldo Newcomer, Col. E.H.R. Green, James Ellsworth, and Howard Newcomb, just to mention a few.

Today's literature primarily revolves around the commercial aspect of things. Coin World became one of the fastest growing subscription periodicals in 1960 because it offered a weekly "trends" section pertaining to prices.

In 1963 the "Graysheet" or Coin Dealer Newsletter (which was actually printed on ivory colored paper when it began) was launched amidst several other similar publications. Now there are quarterly "Pop" reports listing the coins graded by the third party grading services PCGS and NGC. They provide subjective condition rarity information while distorting the true rarity of many issues. These do serve a purpose, but there are many other fine reference books written about coins. The most interesting ones lately have to do with the people who collected them. Q. David Bowers has been the acknowledged leader in this regard.

If you consider coins to be a good investment, you can get all the facts you need such as frequency of appearance, pedigree information, and prices realized from auction catalogues. Few people realize just how scarce certain prices realized lists are. Believe it or not, I would welcome the opportunity to purchase almost any printed prices realized list prior to 1940. Photocopies are oftentimes the only way to obtain the necessary information because the originals just aren't available. Prices realized lists are the most overlooked, critical piece of information in all of numismatics.

Speaking of prices realized, the first catalogue ever to contain the prices realized was a special post-sale edition of Ed Cogan's December 19, 1859, sale. He even printed a few (under 10 copies) in large paper format. Interestingly, it was Cogan who created the first catalogue with plates of coins (photographs) in his MacKenzie sale of June 23, 1869. The first catalogue to contain color plates was over 100 years later, and the first one to feature color plates of every lot was Paramount's September 14, 1981, Kruthoffer U.S. Gold sale. A special edition of this sale was reprinted in limited numbers with the prices realized in red ink next to each lot.

Because there have been so many different catalogues issued (over 15,000 so far), it's difficult to know which ones would benefit your collecting interest. Someone interested in shipwreck items would not find a currency catalogue to be worthwhile. Likewise, someone specializing in early coppers would have little interest in the 1982 Eliasberg U.S. Gold sale. Cataloguers usually provide a good mixture in their sales. Only by examining the contents can you find the "jewels-in-the-rough". Choosing catalogues is like buying coins, the best way is to know your dealer. This is especially true if you change interests along the way. Literature dealers can be helpful in letting you know the proper catalogues for your field of interest.

Coins and catalogues go together; it's been that way since the beginning. The best part is you can keep numismatic literature at home to study whenever you wish instead of in a bank vault. With coin auctions evolving electronically on the Internet, there will soon be no more catalogues printed. This should click on a few light bulbs!

As collectors, we understand such things as rarity, market supply, and potential increases. Not only are the prices very low in comparison to coins, but the information contained within the pages can save you large sums of money on future purchases. Knowledge is the secret of success. The smart numismatists are the ones who not only collect pieces of metal, but pieces of literature, as well. Get involved with numismatic literature as soon as possible. You'll be glad you did.

A NUMISMATIST

Coin World, March 29, 1999

by Coin World Staff

"A numismatist is someone who studies the field of numismatics.

A numismatist can be a collector or a dealer, but doesn't have to be either.

A number of years ago, while in attendance at a numismatic conference in Belgium, several individuals, when asked what they collected, responded, "I don't collect, I'm a numismatist."

For those individuals, it was the study of coins they found interesting, not the collecting.

While several organizations offer courses in various aspects of numismatics, American universities do not, to the best of our knowledge, offer degrees in numismatics.

One does not have to pass examinations, appear before a panel of peers, respond to questions and be judged to have an acceptable level of knowledge to become a numismatist, unlike other disciplines.

(However, other numismatists may individually judge and comment on the quality of other numismatists' work, as in any field of study.)

So how does one become a numismatist?

One becomes a numismatist by studying lots of coins (or medals, tokens, paper money and like objects) and learning their history.

Many numismatists study historical documents related to their fields (much of the best numismatic literature of the 20th century resulted from the close study of U.S. Mint documents in the National Archives).

Often, numismatists write about their findings in commercial periodicals, club journals or books.

University studies in related disciplines are useful to numismatists.

History, finance and metallurgy are all useful, as are foreign language skills for those interested in researching non-U.S. coins."

Q. DAVID BOWERS -- PREDICTIONS, Pt. 6

Coin World, April 5, 1999

"Anyone interested in maximizing value in terms of money spent would do well to "learn the lessons of history."

They should drop everything and start reading about the development of American numismatics (which began in a significant way in 1857 with the discontinuation of the copper cent), changing market trends, etc.

Then, close your eyes and think. At this point, you will not need my advice or that of anyone else. Thoughts will come to you automatically."
